The rumor that Gen. Miles has had a fight with the Baunocks in Yellowstone Park is generally credited at Bismarck. It is known, that after leaving Ft. Keogh with his party, they struck a fresh trail, and apprehending danger, the ladies of the party were sent to Ft. Ellis, while the command went in pursuit of the Indians. A brother of Senator Dorsey, who left Ft. Keogh the 5th inst., say a report that Miles had a fight in which twenty-seven of his escort were killed, and the remainder surrounded had reached there, that two companies of monuted infantry from Ft. Custer and a band of Cheyenne Indians from Keogh had gone to their assistance. The mail was held at Keogh a day and a half for particulars, but left without any dauger. The agate covers large areas of the Park, scattered over the surface in chips and larger fragments, and occurring also in massive ledges. Only a very small percentage of it, however, con-tains the curious and delicate crystallization of iron known as moss. Curious notions prevail relative to this substance. Formerly, it was a common opinion that the moss was fixed in the stone by a photographic process, and I have often been shown specimens which the finders averred contained faithful pictures of clumps of bushes, groves of trees of an extended landscape visible from the point where they were picked. from the point where they were picked

The agate is hard, tough and suscepti-ble of a high polish. Specimens are valued according to the perfection and beauty of the moss clusters contained and the clearness of the stone apart from the moss. The great agate field is south of the Grand and west of the Wilsouth of the Grand and west of the Wil-liams River, on a high sage plain. It is six or eight miles in length and nearly as great in width, though agates are not found all over this area. It has been culled and picked over by hundreds of people, and thousands of jewels worn to-day all over the United States bear settings from this agate patch.

Some agates are found north of the Grand, directly opposite, and the largest and finest specimen I ever saw was picked up there in 1863. There is an agate patch—or several of them, small in extent—on the divide between Troublesome River and Corral Creek, north of the Grand. Two erthree years ago a small deposit of them was found near Fraser River, in the eastern edge of the Park, not far from where the Berthoud pass and Rollins wagon roads come together. In all the localities thus far described the moss is black or dark brown-the usual color.

Near Grand River, on the north side and about three miles west of Hot Sul-phur Springs, is a small area where red moss agates are found—that is, the moss is red, or reddish brown, instead of black. Nearly opposite, across the river, near Beaver Creek, is another patch of the same kind. Red moss agates are very rare and curious. No search has been made in any of these localities beneath the natural surface of the greund for vatuable agates. Those gathered have been picked up on the surface, generally in broken fragments of stone that showed the mess naturally urally.
